“ This last year has been hard on everyone in Belinda's family. When someone you love so dearly has such a terrible disease with a poor prognosis, what do you do? Obviously we, her family couldn't fix her, we couldn't make her well, no matter how much we wanted to. It is a shocking thing to go through. We were lucky that we got another year from her diagnosis to create memories and love her. But that is not enough. I wanted and needed more time. I was not ready for her to go. I talked to her or saw her almost every day. My purpose for the last year was to make sure Belinda never felt like she she had this burden alone, to take care of anything I could to make things easier for her. And now in spite of all the efforts made on her behalf she has gone and left me behind. I wish I could tell her one more time how much I love her and how proud I was that she let me help her through this. I feel empty now and without purpose. She had a big beautiful personality that I will miss until I see her again. What do you do with this much grief.
